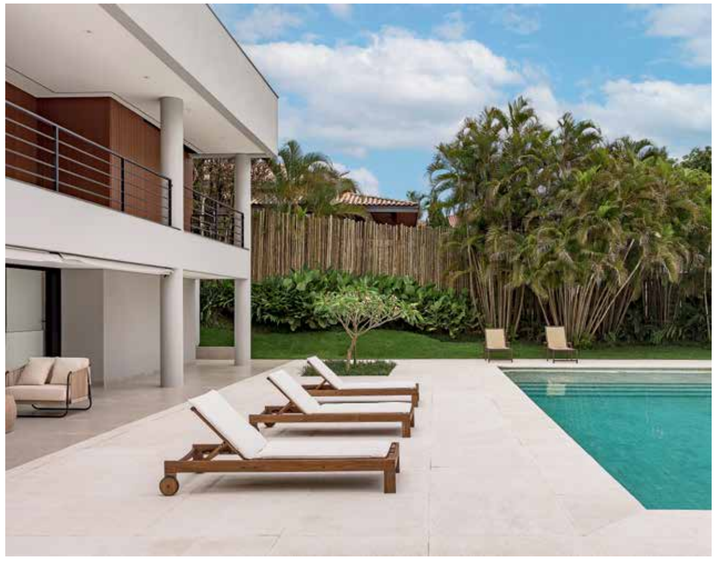
LUEDKE ARQUITETURA

CASA DO LAGO

Nem a cobertura sobreviveu à profunda reforma: onde havia um telhado de chalé suíço, hoje paira uma platibanda. Derrubadas várias paredes internas, reforçada a estrutura, ampliadas as aberturas e reposicionadas suítes e salas, a família conquistou uma casa onde a luz natural é farta e a visão do lago, soberana. As fachadas receberam brises amadeirados e pedra. Internamente, a marcenaria – ora laqueada, ora de lâminas de carvalho-vermelho – sobressai em meio ao porcelanato cimentício e aos estofados claros. Do lado de fora, o piso atérmico tornou mais agradáveis os momentos ao redor da piscina.


LAKE HOUSE: Not even the roof survived the extensive renovation: where there was a Swiss chalet roof, there is now a platband. With several internal walls removed, the structure reinforced, openings enlarged, and suites and living rooms repositioned, the family has achieved a house where natural light is abundant and the view of the lake is sovereign. The façades feature wood-paneled brises soleil and stone. Inside, the carpentry – sometimes lacquered, sometimes made of red oak veneers – stands out against the cement porcelain tiles and pale upholstery. Outside, the athermic flooring has made moments around the pool more pleasant.
